THE latest unprovoked aggression by a dog against a two-year-old child could be on the rise, new figures show. An RSPCA spokesman said: "We are now seeing more reports of dogs attacking children because there is a growing number of dogs being let off their leads. "The message to dog owners is that when you allow your dog off its lead there is a greater risk of it being knocked over. "Many families have their own garden or children's play park. "We advise that, to avoid attacks, dogs should only be taken for walks when the lead is firmly attached." Leading behavioural scientist b7e8fdf5c8
